1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
 - I. Claim 1, drawn to a method of reading a split region code, classified in class 235, subclass 462.12.
 - II. Claims 2-4, drawn to a card carrying an information code, classified in class 235, subclass 487.
 - III. Claims 5-14, drawn to a card reading system, classified in class 235, subclass 375.
 - IV. Claims 15,16, drawn to a dot pattern code on a card, classified in class 235, subclass 494.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

2. Inventions I and II are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention of I has separate utility such as reading a code on a different object such as a package or box. See MPEP § 806.05(d).
3. Inventions I and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination (group III) as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination (group I) as claimed because the combination does not require the printing of the code. The subcombination has separate utility such as scanning a single region code.

4. Inventions I and IV are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention I has separate utility such as a reading means for a bar code. See MPEP § 806.05(d).

5. Inventions II and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination (group III) as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination (group II) as claimed because the combination does not require the specific card configuration of the subcombination card, such as the camera. The subcombination has separate utility such as a card containing preprinted information.

6. Inventions II and IV are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination (group IV) as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination (group II) as claimed such as the camera. The subcombination has separate utility such as a card containing a bar code.

7. Inventions III and IV are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention III has separate utility such as a method of reading a nonsectional code and the invention of IV has separate utility such as a method reading preprinted codes. See MPEP § 806.05(d).

8. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

9. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and the search required for Group I is not required for Groups II, III or IV; the search required for Group II is not required for Groups I, III or IV; the search required for Group III is not required for Groups I, II or IV; nor is the search required for Group IV required for Group I, II or III, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

10. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

11. Any inquiry concerning this communication or earlier communications from the examiner should be directed to Karl D Frech whose telephone number is (571) 272-2390. The examiner can normally be reached on maxi-flex.
